Splice Sounds Collaboration User Guide

Mar.2017

1. Introduction

The new integration seamlessly connects the TORAIZ SP-16 to the world's largest collection of high quality samples and loops. You can pick your favorite individual samples from the Splice Sounds catalog of over 1 million sounds from world-class providers, build and save custom sample kits, and program 32-step sequences on the web and on mobile devices using Beatmaker, Splice's online sequencer. And now, you can easily export your custom sample kits and sequences to the TORAIZ SP-16 with the click of a button. There's no need to import samples one by one. Simply download your creations as SCENE files to your laptop or a USB drive, connect the TORAIZ SP-16 via USB and transfer the SCENE files across. Then you can use the hardware's features and FX to manipulate your sounds further.

2. Check Your Firmware Version

1. Turn on the unit.
2. Tap UTILITY in the HOME screen. The UTILITY screen appears.
3. Turn the rotary selector to scroll down to the second row from the bottom. There, you will be able to see the firmware currently running on your unit.
 - ※ Make sure the unit is higher than ver.1.30. If you are using an older version, please update the latest firmware from here.
4. Tap UTILITY again to exit the UTILITY screen.

3. Outline

Browse over 1 million samples and presets, including original packs from renowned artists. Then, make and share beats in your browser using Beatmaker.

Download the beats as TORAIZ SP-16 SCENE files (the SCENE includes sample kit and sequence pattern). Also you can download each sample individually.

Copy the SCENE files to SP-16's internal memory via USB cable or copy to a USB thumb drive and insert it to the SP-16.

You can import the SCENE files to a SCENE of current project and play the exact same beat as you made on the Beatmaker.

Then you can use the hardware's features and FX to manipulate your sounds further.
